

The Position of the People in the Political Foundations of the Islamic Revolution of Iran

Alireza Naeef¹, Mohammad Mahdi Sepehr^{2*}

Abstract

There have been researches on the position of people in the government based on the thoughts of some Islamic and non-Islamic scholars and scholars, but in relation to the position of people in the political foundations of the Islamic Revolution after reviewing the research was not found, of course, there are two general views about this issue that there is a maximum and minimal view about the role of people in the Islamic government, so now we are faced with the question that based on political principles. What position does the Islamic Revolution of people have in the government, considering the decisive role of the people in the elections, this article tries to achieve the Islamic revolution's view on the position of people in the political foundations of the Islamic Republic by using the framework of the right thought and the obligation of political rights of every citizen in the structure of each system is investigated, so to investigate this idea through the analytical work structure method in the system. This article has taken help. The results show that in the political foundations of the Islamic Revolution, people have a decisive role in the formation, participation and continuation of the Islamic government.

Keywords: People, Political Foundations, Islamic Revolution, Participation

1. Professor of Regional Studies, Community University of Mustafa, alireza128@gmail.com

2. Ph.D. Student in Political Sociology, sepehr_new_man@yahoo.com

* Corresponding Author: sepehr_new_man@yahoo.com

Received:2022/01/25 Accepted:2022/02/27